Let's Start!

I have a funny anecdote to tell you!

Learning Outcome

Describe characteristics of different people and their jobs.

Ask your partner:

- An anecdote is a short story. Do you have a funny anecdote about work? About traveling?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about people's personalities.
- I can talk about celebrations and customs.
- I can talk or report about things, actions and events.

Let's Explore!

John tells an anecdote about Mexico.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Peter: Tell me an anecdote about Mexico.
John: OK, well, did you know that many people order food from street vendors?
Peter: Yes, I know that.
John: The streets were always full of people. I bought cooked dishes and exotic fruits cut into pieces.
Peter: Cool.
John: The Mexican people like to put lime juice and red chili spice on fruit.
Peter: Really?
John: I didn't know what it was. I thought it was vanilla syrup with red sugar on top of the fruit. The street vendor was a warm, generous man. He put lots and lots of it on.
Peter: And then ... ?
John: Then I took a big bite of the fruit, and my mouth started burning! I couldn't speak! Everyone around me laughed.
Peter: Oh, John!

Let's Practice!

Anecdotes

An anecdote is a short, informal story a person tells about something that happened to them or to someone they know.

People often tell anecdotes to show cultural differences, or to entertain a group with a funny story.

Anecdotes happened in the past. You use the Simple Past tense to tell anecdotes.

Examples:

- The Mexican people like to put lime juice and red chili spice on fruit. I didn't know what it was. I thought it was vanilla syrup with red sugar on top of the fruit.
- I took a big bite of the fruit, and my mouth started burning! I couldn't speak! Everyone around me laughed.
